1. On 14 August 1946, a meeting was held by the Chinese employees of the former Kiessling Restaurant (Kiessling and Bader Restaurant) for the purpose of organizing a union. Several speeches were made criticizing the activities and policies of the Kuomintang Party and Chiang Kai-shek. Other speakers advocated the orientation of China on Soviet policies, doctrines, and organizations. Also, statements were made to the effect that China should have the same type of government as Russia.
2. Some of the leaders of the Soviet community have said that since professional unions have been authorized by Chiang Kai-shek, this is an excellent opportunity to communize China. Also, this work, at present, is being carried out by specialists who receive their training in Special Service Schools in the USSR and obtain financial and other support directly from Soviet Russia.
